

First Moon Project Shot Is Planned

WHITE SANDS, N. M., Aug. 26 (AP)—The national aeronautics administration (NACA) today will make the first shot of the project moonshot program at White Sands missile range Wednesday.

A Little Joe II booster rocket, to be used for power on the space system of the first U. S. space ship bound for the moon, will be fired on a suborbital test over the southern New Mexico desert.

NACA officials at White Sands said there was only a slim chance of the launch delay the number of the 30-foot long solid-fuel rocket.

Wesley Messing, resident manager for NACA at White Sands, said "We have to have maximum safety for photographs and visual observation of the test, but clear weather is the rule for this season."

In many respects, the Little Joe II may be thought of as the "insurance" for the two astronauts to make the first lunar trip.

Future Space Flights to End on Land

VICTORIA, Tex., Aug. 26 (AP)—The man in charge of all landing operations for the manned spacecraft center (MSC) in Houston disclosed last night that landings of both the two-man Gemini and three-man Apollo flights will be made on land and not on the water.

John G. Zaroun, head of the recovery branch of the landing operations and facility section of the MSC, said the landings will be restricted to areas where population is sparse.

"Although we are part of the widespread complex of the U. S. space port, no landings will be made from southeast Texas, nor will the returning astronauts land at Houston," he said. "The future flights of both the two-man Gemini spacecraft and the three-man Apollo spacecraft for the moon voyage will be made on land instead of water and these landings will probably be restricted to less populated areas."

Designer of Famous Jeep Found Dead

DAYTON, O., Aug. 26 (AP)—Karl K. Probst, 70, creator of the Jeep, was found dead at his home Sunday of an apparent overdose of sleeping pills. He had been ill for several weeks.

Plans for the Jeep, which he drew in 1940 as a consulting engineer for the Hamilton Car company, Butler, Pa., were found at his bedside.

The vehicle that became famous during World War II was designed by Probst in one week.

In 1944 Willys-Overland and the Ford Motor company discontinued the vehicle's origin, but a federal trade commission ruling said Probst was the designer.

Socialist Parley Criticizes Reds And Capitalists

OSLO, Norway, Aug. 26 (AP)—More than 200 young socialists from 75 countries ended a week-long policy session by accusing both capitalism and communism of hastening "the day of total annihilation of the world."

The seventh world congress of the International Union of Socialist Youth adopted a declaration of principles Sunday calling for disarmament and giving unreserved support to the United Nations.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Much more than expected, and indeed, before the average American had bothered to find out what the European Commission was up to, it has been found that the free trade paradise envisioned by the plan to have free trade in Europe, now it has reached the serious stage where there is a stern talk of American retaliation for the Common market has done to Uncle Sam's chickens.

That the Common market did to these chickens was the kind of thing that some of the old, discredited politicians who were European and American only European, it increased the tariff on U. S. chickens from 4 cents a pound to more than 13 cents a pound, that just about ruined Uncle Sam's 48 million dollar poultry export business.

Common Thieves

"You can fill a hall easily in this country if the topic in combating common thieves is Americans abhor communism as a doctrine and a system of life. Nevertheless, in a curious way a lot of this nation's citizenry seems to be drawn, consciously or unconsciously, to certain communal notions about property."

The flagrant robbery of the avowed communist is one thing. Quite another is the taking of property which the taker, somehow, persuades himself is less than theft.

We have become great "borrowers" often glossing over the fact that the borrowing is done without the consent of the lender.

For long years, many have convinced themselves that "souvenir collecting" justified lifting all kinds of objects from hotels, motels and similar establishments serving the public.

When, as today, this reaches the point where people march out of these places bearing lamps, television sets, blankets and other costly items, it suggests that the souvenir hunters are going for pretty big game.

The new justification, evidently, is that these public establishments "can afford it." There is no feeling, it seems, that an individual is being robbed — only that some impersonal thing, a faceless materialism, is being robbed.

Obviously this is self-deception of a high order. Calling theft by a lesser name does not make it anything but theft. And it is a piece of effrontery to declare that any establishment "can afford it."

One of the worst signs of the "your property is mine" philosophy is the depletion of college and public libraries. In an eastern school reports it loses some 2,000 books a year this way, not to mention other losses through mutilation (the party ruthlessly slices up a book to get those parts he wants).

Here, plainly, the losers are the honest students who must pore the books; their private requirements are superior to the general need.

Treasures on other people's land is a steadily rising favorite. The fellow who orders-treasures on the land is not understood that the land he bought as his own should be shared with everybody.

All of this, of course, adds to "something for nothing" and "the world owes me a living," this kind of comforting self-justification goes much too far? The "something has to be taken from somebody." The "world" turns out to be one or more persons.

Taking from them whether it be an ash can or a television set is thievery. No amount of shiny paint can make it anything else.

BREATHING FOR VICTIMS

Somebody is always reminding us that, despite the existence of lobbies for practically everything, there are still some pretty sizable groups unrepresented in our society.

During the 1960 election campaign, President Kennedy made a considerable effort to take care of the rather vaguely expressed needs of one big group. Nothing much came of that.

How about a Crime Victims' Council? Surely in these days a quite legitimate but heavily neglected concern is the needs of crime victims, or more criminals, there are room also for a little attention to their victims.

Not long ago a vaunted Eastern newspaper was bemoaning the fact that "fall did not seem to do much to rehabilitate the careers of criminals." It is an argument often heard in many contexts relating to crime.

Nevertheless, a victims' council, if in being, might make one solid point in answer. Putting criminals in jail does not give the chance that for a time at least, those particular offenders will be out on the streets attacking new victims. From the victims' side, it looks like pure gain.

SENIOR CITIZENS

Senior citizens seeking a new place in the sun may be interested in the fact that among 4,000 posts available in the peace corps in 45 countries are hundreds of posts which are filled by qualified persons who have recently retired or are contemplating retirement.

These openings are being created by peace corpsmen who are completing their two-year tours of duty and by requests for expansion of projects, or for new programs.

Says Sargent Shriver, peace corps director: "We want as many senior volunteers as we can get for overseas assignments because, in the experience, patience and wisdom only experience and time can give."

Basic requirements: a bona fide skill in some trade or profession, ability to pass a satisfactory physical examination and a complete and complete of an orientation period.

The modest compensation and expenses do not conflict with pension, social security or dual compensation laws, the state corps says.

RETAILING

This brought the expected anguish from American politicians whose constituents were asked. They had great international statesman and Rhodes scholar, Sen. Phil Whelan, D. Ark., said in print, on account of American retaliation for the Common market, it is a matter of life and death to a man can't be a statesman unless he can keep getting re-elected.

Official Washington stored about the matter for several weeks, then announced that it was considering a list of "at least 24 import items on which tariffs would be increased. The date is a deadline for the Common market; if it reduces the chicken tariff by Oct. 1, the U. S. will manage a change of mind about its own tariff increase.

PEOPLE IS PEOPLE. This sort of situation is not in the spirit either of the Common market or of last year's trade expansion act passed by congress to foster trade between the two nations. Some of the foreign trade. Trade barriers were to have been taken on both sides of the Atlantic, and there was to be a free exchange of goods that would make both sides rich.

But people remain human, on both sides of the Atlantic, and this sort of thing of farmers, whether they live in France or in Arkansas. Since 1948, the highly efficient and automated American chicken has been a major item in the poultry market, and European politicians have heard about it from their constituents, who vote.

COMPROMISE POSSIBLE. It is no good talking the American politician that it is a matter of life and death. They are not. They are adopting American mass production techniques. The tariff boosters are not. Besides, being Americans, the politicians figure no foreigner can ever raise chickens as efficiently as the American. They are not in Arkansas and Delaware, they are not yet convinced the European chicken market to the European.

As the White House and the state department, the official line is that there will be a compromise settlement satisfactory to both sides. After all, some 2,000 books a year this way, not to mention other losses through mutilation (the party ruthlessly slices up a book to get those parts he wants).

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (AP)—The world's largest picnic lunch will be served at the White House today, as the nation's leaders gather for the annual picnic. The picnic is a tradition that has been held at the White House since 1856. It is a time when the President and his family, as well as the Vice President and his family, and other members of the administration, gather for a meal. Alaska Highway Trip Is "Good" One, But Quick Return Isn't Called for WHEATON, Yukon Territory, Aug. 26.—It is less than 1,000 miles back to the beginning of the Alaska highway, but some of the best scenic spots seen by taking the "long way around" were reached Whitehorse in two days after deciding to start home. The "long way" was through Dawson, the last major point before Whitehorse was reached. Others had cautioned about the Dawson road, but we didn't want to spend in a grave pit alongside the road miles from anywhere. The second day spent in the Yukon Territory campgrounds across the river from Dawson. Going into Dawson entails a ride on a free ferry maintained by the government. And after you've seen Dawson, you wonder why it's there. Dawson is not only old, it's decaying.

The return of Dawson recalls the recent gold rush days—in fact today was the start of the "discovery" celebration marking

Police Kill Thug After Wild Chase

HARRODSBURG, Ky., Aug. 26.—Police today killed a burglar who kidnapped five persons in a chase spree that stretched half way across the state of Kentucky. The spree began when the burglar kidnapped a policeman who caught him robbing a country club near Newport and then fled away with a deputy sheriff. He shot the kidnaper to death. Harrodsburg police immediately identified. They believed his last name was Neale.

The fugitive fled in the policeman's car, taking the officer with him, commanded a station wagon containing a family of four, and was killed as he tried to flee in another stolen car as a chase of pursuing policemen died in on him.

The burglar kidnapped George A. Arnold, assistant chief of the Campbell county police department, who caught him burglarizing the Highland Country club on U.S. 27 south of Newport.

Police said the fugitive got into a stolen car, taking Arnold with him and headed south on U.S. 27. About 70 miles away, near Lexington, the fugitive exchanged the stolen car with a deputy sheriff who had been alerted to watch the road.

Somewhere along the way, the bandit released Arnold unharmed and took over a station wagon containing a man, his wife, and two children and headed south. The fugitive shot out the tire of a three police cars chasing him south from Lexington along U.S. 27.

The fugitive was forced to stop when police shot out the transmission of the station wagon near Brooklyn bridge across a river near Harrodsburg.

He grabbed the 7-year-old girl to use as a shield as he fled toward a car parked in front of a small store. The child's mother wrestled the girl away and the fugitive ran across the street and climbed into a woman's car.

He was shot to death, however, by Fayette County Deputy Sheriff James Molloy who pulled up beside the fugitive before he could get the car moving.

The five persons kidnapped along the way were not injured. Police said they had exchanged shots with the bandit for more than 30 miles.

The bandit was quoted by the woman whose station wagon was taken as saying, "All I want is to get to a wooded area or to Tennessee."

The chase began near Newport, directly across the Ohio river from Cincinnati and ended near Harrodsburg, 120 miles away.

Crime Rate up

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—YB figures released today show crime in the nation for the first six months of the year was nine per cent higher than in the first half of 1962. There was a 13 per cent increase in larceny of autos and over a nine per cent rise in auto theft, and increases of eight and ten per cent in burglary and robbery, respectively.

the discovery of gold. The old "Palace Grand" theater has been restored and the one-time home of Robert Service has been preserved.

Everywhere else, buildings are falling apart or being looted for roofing or old lumber. Windows are gone or boarded up. Dawson has only the memory of the past, with little present and no future.

The trip over the Dawson highway completes the route. From here back to Dawson Creek, it's just a case of going back over a highway we've already covered. When we started the trip, we had various reports on the Alaska highway, including one that it was in the best condition ever and another that it was "absolutely horrible with dozens of cars stranded by flat tires and shattered windshields."

Now, we're in a position to give an opinion. All in all, the highways have been better than anticipated. Some stretches of the Alaska highway are rough, others can handle cars at 30 miles an hour—the potholed speed limit—quite nicely.

The Alaska highway is no snowdrift. Those accustomed only to surfaced highways might be inclined to label it "horrible."

On the other hand, drivers who have used some of Idaho's back country roads might find the Alaska highway a pleasant surprise.

One thing is quite obvious—a driver has to use a good deal of changed one for three women on a cold windy day on the Haines highway. Another was in a car in which a woman waited on the Mt. McKinley road. Both were rayon tires.

The woman in the car in life-King's part said her husband had gone to get a tire fixed because they had two flats. We've seen many discarded tires along the highway and at various stops have glanced at them. They're well-worn rayon tires.

Before the start of the trip our car was equipped with new, nylon, tubeless tires. Our trailer has six-ply, tubeless nylons. We may yet have lots of tire trouble, but if so, the fault may be more with the driver than with the tires. A Tacoma, Wash., mechanic told us a nylon tire on his trailer and broke the springs while driving.

In the trip worth while if you have the time, money and inclination. You should allow six weeks or you might find yourself on the verge of exhaustion all the time. Our bookkeeper said the trip, as of last night, has cost $244.53, most of which has gone for gasoline. The highest gas price was 63 cents for a four-quart gallon at South Fork lodge on the way to Dawson.

The inclination? Well, last night in Dawson we talked to a man, who bragged it was his third trip up here in five years. He and his wife were traveling in a camper, which we have mentioned before as probably the best way to travel the Alaska highway.

The man said he was a retired professor from the Kansas City Star. His admission he had made the trip three times in five years merely served to strengthen a long-standing opinion of proof-readers.

It has been a good trip, but not one we would care to repeat in the near future. If ever there's just too much travel involved before the acclivity starts to justify it.

Food for Americans

By GAYNOR MADDOX

Here's a reader idea that may shock some of you: Serve sliced bologna with cantaloupe. We tested it. Surprised yes, but the shock was easy to swallow.

"The idea comes from Mrs. C. who manages a small country inn. 'Oh, I know that sliced Italian ham is what you are supposed to serve with melon, but I found that thinly sliced bologna is wonderful with melon, too. And it costs a lot less,' she informs us.

Incidentally, melon is a blessing to gourmet weight-watchers. In a half of a 6-inch diameter melon there are only 37 calories.

You'll like this melon salad. Could even be a main course.

They got one in the third when Paul Faulker got to first on another throwing error, went on to second on a walk and came home on a Felix Delon single.

Major got on in the fifth with a walk, moved to second on a ground out. A combination of Jim Harris' single and the throwing error brought him home.

In the first, Magic Valley scored when Nolan Knobel, Gene Kerns and Alex Johnson scored. Later Mike Marshall carried home Gene Kerns. Jim Campbell carried home Gene Kerns.

Ladies' Amateur Golf Champ Was Belated Entrant

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 25 (AP)—Three-time champion Mrs. Anne Quigg Wells, 25, and her victim, teen-ager Penny Conley, hadn't planned to enter the 1963 Women's National Amateur golf tournament. But both got plenty of mileage out of their decisions. Mrs. Wells, a 35-hole final Saturday 2 and 1 over the high school junior from Spokane, Wash.

A previous winner in 1958 and 1961, Mrs. Wells' decision was made for her by her husband of two months. He is an attorney and a history teacher at Mt. Vernon, Wash. high school.

"I should give David credit," she said. "I didn't know that I'd play much of a role in this, but he urged me to... He insisted I drop my housework and come up to the clubhouse before the tournament to sharpen my game. He is responsible for getting me to get back to work on my golf."

Mrs. Conley, 18-year-old clubber, broke through the ranks of the amateurs, tested her first major tournament when she got to the semifinals of the Western Junior girls event.

She was beaten in the final of the recent National Girls tournament and decided to try the National Women's only because Alvin Conley, her father, was in the tournament. She is only 24 miles from Williamstown.

"I figured that I'd just come here and watch," Peggy said. "My ambition was to get to the semifinals. I never felt I'd do this far."

She would recommend this tournament for any 15-year-old girl. Mrs. Conley continued, "I'll be here next year to see what I can do."

"She's got the greatest heart I've seen in a long time," Mrs. Wells said. "I just can't say enough about this girl. She's going to be a fine player."

"When I went 3-0 I figured I would coast in. But Peggy kept me on my toes. She's a real match player. She's putting her back into it."

Hearing Held At Buhl Over Bus Policy

Buhl, Aug. 26.—More than 100 persons attended the public hearing held by the Buhl school board Friday evening in the high school auditorium to discuss school bus transportation and registration fee problems.

Fred Brallafoed, chairman of the board of trustees, presided and conducted a question and answer session. Other board members present included Dr. H. E. Hamnerquist, William T. Atkins, Eugene Thomas and Alfred Davis.

Also in attendance were State Sen. George Blick, State Rep. William Lanning and Rex Engelking, superintendent of Buhl public schools.

The meeting was requested by school district patrons who wanted information on the board's recent decision not to transport students living within a one and one-half mile radius of school and the board's action on registration fees.

Brallafoed pointed out to the group that action of the last legislature reduced state appropriation for the Buhl school district by a total of $30,000 over the past year for the coming biennium.

He said that because of the failure of local school patrons to pass the extra four-mile levy election for school operation, certain cut-backs had to be initiated in the present school program.

Brallafoed said that by eliminating two teachers, three school buses, cutting classroom supplies, allowing no maintenance for buildings and increasing registration fees, the board has been able to save $10,000.

However, he stated the school district is facing a $20,000 deficit for the 1964-65 year.

Brallafoed told the congregation the local school district always has transported students living within a one and one-half mile radius of school at district expense with no reimbursement from the state. Now, because of the money shortage, they declared, the responsibility of the safety of these children rests on the parents.

However, he pointed out, the board is concerned about the safety of youngsters walking on the highways. The local board is working with state, county and local highway agencies for the development of traffic safety controls.

Both Blick and Lanning spoke briefly and answered questions.

Russ Hate Campaign Growing

MOSCOW, Aug. 26 (AP).—The Soviet hate campaign against Red China reached another peak last week-end.

The government newspaper Izvestia Saturday night printed an expose on food rationing in China. Sunday, the communist party newspaper Pravda compared Chinese propaganda with that issued by Adolf Hitler's propaganda minister, Joseph Goebbels. And for good measure, the official Soviet military newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda (Red Star) hammered at the Chinese for turning "half weapons against neutralist India."

The revelations about food rationing in China were an Izvestia article which criticized Chinese newspapers for reporting that food is more expensive in the Soviet Union than in China. Izvestia retorted that the opposite is true—"Food and clothing cost less in the USSR than in China."

"One more important thing,"

Izvestia said, "Goods and food products can be bought freely in our country but in China they are in short supply. Strict food rationing has existed there since 1954 and in recent years there has been rationing for practically all consumer goods."

Izvestia said it was necessary to report this because of "the dirty flow of lies about life in the USSR which fill the pages of the Peking newspapers."

Pravda strode into the fray with a full page of letters from readers who unanimously heaped scorn on the Chinese. The tone and content of the letters were similar to those which used to be printed in full-page displays, "ashing Western imperialists."

One of the strongest letters was from a group of retired officers who wrote that Chinese propaganda pamphlets about Soviet Union "are monstrous in their falsity, accusations and fabrications."
